

COWBOYS STADIUM

Stadium features

Cowboys Stadium, designed by HKS Sports & Entertainment Group, is a $1.15 billion engineering marvel designed as a monument to sports, architecture and technology. It's among the nation's largest stadiums. Although it tops Texas Stadium in size and luxury, the Cowboys' new home uses retractable panels to mimic the iconic hole in the roof and pay homage to the past.

There are two distinct features of the stadium that stand out:

END ZONE ENTRANCE

The retractable glass doors at the end zones are the tallest in the world. The glass doors open to allow spectators to enter onto "party platforms."

PARTY PLATFORMS

Both end zones have space behind seats on three levels that are standing-room only.

RETRACTABLE ROOF:

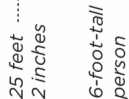

The retractable roof reveals a 256-foot-by-410-foot opening. It takes about nine minutes to open or close the roof.

ARCHES:

Two steel arches, weighing 3,255 tons each, span the length of the stadium. At 1,225 feet, these are the longest single-span arches in the world.

ABUTMENTS:

Anchoring each arch are massive structural abutments.
